Work Experience

Production Worker

Critical Mass - Denver, CO

August 2019 to October 2021

Log into the computer checking to see what batches of concentrate needed to be done. After carefully looking at the batch numbers I'd go and retrieve the batch from the racks. Placing it on top of my table carefully. Then I'd go and get all the requirements needed to pack the batch. After packing the batches I constantly checked to see if the batches had results. If they had results they were to be fully packed and labeled correctly. After each batch was finished they were marked down as ready. Then brought to the trim room where they can be fully processed and get delivered to the stores.

Production Worker

OraLabs Inc. - Parker, CO

January 2019 to June 2019

Accordingly looked at the serial number for the product needed to be packed. After carefully observing the paper the product was to be retrieved from the floor. After retrieving the product it was brought to our assigned station. Once brought; the stickers needed for the product had to be carefully placed on the machine. Since the stickers were placed on the machine we had to test it one time to make sure no problems accrued during the production process. If the sticker on the product had air bubbles it was to be taken off immediately. All the finished product was placed into a bag that had to be sealed inside a box. After sealing everything correctly I had to double check and make sure my orders for the day were completed. Once completed perfectly the product was brought to the other side of the warehouse. Getting it ready for shipping.
