nockout

WALTEK - Anoka, MN - 2012-05 - 2012-10

My job was to take completed parts for contractors and knock off the shell after it had been cooked in the foundry. I used air chisel to knock off shell on brass, aluminum, and steel parts depending on the contractors specifications. When part was too delicate to use air chisel, I would have to water wash using a high pressure water sprayer to knock off shell. The foundry during the summer can get up to 130 degrees at times. Some parts are little in size and others ranged up to 100 pounds.

packager, brazzer

SILVER KING - Plymouth, MN - 2011-09 - 2012-03

had to assemble from start to finish restaurant refrigerators and coolers. A minimum number of units was needed everyday to meet customer statistics. Before the final product gets packaged, I was the last person to make sure product works efficiently. I had to ensure the product met all satisfactory requirements. use of welding torch to braze copper. Package finish product and scan into inventory system.
