Skills:

As a Health Care Specialist in the U.S. Army, I learned to provide emergency medical treatment and transportation from point of injury or illness, on or off the battlefield, through the continuum of military health care. Administering emergency and routine medical treatment to critical and non-critical patients was central to my military training. Specifically, the Army taught me how to interview patients and record their medical histories; take patients' temperature, pulse and blood pressure; triage patients; keep patient health records and clinical files up-to-date; and immunize and medicate patients.

Other Information:

I have worked independently with minimal instructions, and learn very quickly. I am detail and team oriented, and I have the desire and drive to excel in everything I do.
