

Lindsay S Holz

lindsayssh78@gmail.com • (757) 975-7815

Experience

Forklift Operator

Old Dominion Freight

October, 2021 — December, 2021 (2 months)

In a 300-bay hub, I used a forklift to unload and sort orders. Once the skids were divided into orders, they had their weight and dimensions determined. They were then transported to their outbound trailer, securely loaded and scanned onto the load.

Receiving Specialist

Target

October, 2007 — July, 2020 (12 years 9 months)

As receiver, I had three bays, a bailer, a compactor, and a rolling door. I was responsible for everything that came and went in between. Accuracy, speed, multi-tasking, and strong relationships with outside vendors and co-workers were all paramount. Before I could do a detailed check-in of product, I had to be sure the product was necessary to meet sales goals and refuse the order when trying to be oversold. In between orders, I gathered, palletized and loaded everything on the day's outbound trailer. In the 'sweeps' back to the DC were many pallets of salvage, repacks, recycling, bails, etc., that had to be tracked. The BOL had to be completed and the pin-lock off the trailer by noon.

I was also in charge of all returns for the store. In addition to QA recalls, there were many product returns to the makers. Each had to be pulled from the stockroom and salesfloor, counted, packaged, labeled to compliance and contain a packing slip. I then shipped them through the carrier specified. I delighted in almost always having my score the highest in the district and gloated when I was #1 in the group of 75 stores.

I was quite good with time management and was able to look at my work week and tell my supervisor if I was going to have time to be sent to other work centers. I was proficient in every work center.

Radiology Technician

United States Army

January, 2004 — September, 2007 (3 years 8 months)

I was an x-ray tech at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany, the first hospital all wounded warriors come to from downrange.

Education

Port St Lucie High

Diploma, January, 1996

Certificates and Licenses

Drivers License

