I was on the assembly line building log splitters and rough cut lawn mowers. Then I became a material handler. I would bring log splitter components to the assembly line to get assembled. I also would unload and load trucks for LTL. I became the lead on the assembly line and started managing 10-15 employees. I was in charge of our inventory and ordering supplies. When the assembly line slowed down I began helping with shipping and receiving. I would request pick ups for our freight, print out BOL's and packing slips, enter in orders for Amazon and other companies

I was the lead and machine operator. I would put the mixed dough in the hopper with a machine. Then the dough was cut in pieces. the machine would roll the peaces of dough in a ball then they would stretch and fall into trays. From there the trays would pass by another machine where different toppings would fall on on the dough. Then trays were put on a rack and once the rack was full they were put in a hot room so bread would expand then baked. I managed 3 employees on the line and made sure machine ran properly.
